Course Title: Arabic Language IV

Study Program: Islamic Theology

Number of ECTS Credits: 6

Course Status: Compulsory

Course Code: 401

Weekly Hours: 2+2

Academic Year: 2026/2027

Semester: VII

Instructor: Assoc. Prof. Dr. Sc. Ziber Lata

Course Objectives and Brief Description of the Course:

The objective of this module is to provide fourth-year students with advanced-level knowledge of the Arabic language from both theoretical and practical perspectives. Arabic, as a core subject of this Faculty, is given special importance because it is the original language of the Qur'an and Hadith, the language of religious sciences, the language of Arab civilization's literature, and of Arabic literature in general.

Through this course, students develop proficiency in correct writing and verbal communication. The use of dictionaries enables them to acquire translation skills from Arabic into Albanian and vice versa.

The aim of teaching this course is to enable students to acquire the following competencies: linguistic competence, communicative competence, and cultural competence. The course includes listening, speaking, reading, writing, and translation.

The three linguistic components are:

1. Sounds (as well as other phenomena related to phonetics).
2. Words (and expressions in context and as terms).
3. Grammatical structures (including a defined amount of grammar, morphology, and dictation).
4. Translation of texts from Arabic into Albanian.

Intended Learning Results:

Upon completion of this semester, the student will be able to:

- Demonstrate a solid understanding of the fundamentals of the Arabic language.
- Comprehend audio recordings and videos in Arabic.
- Understand the majority of Arabic texts.
- Discuss the grammar of both the Arabic and Albanian languages.
- Present critical thinking on linguistic issues that require such an approach.
- Translate texts from Arabic into Albanian.
- Apply the acquired linguistic knowledge in practical contexts whenever the opportunity arises.

Teaching Methodology:

Teaching will be conducted in the form of lectures, encouraging students to engage in interactive discussions by asking questions and performing analyses within the framework of the delivered lecture.

Lectures will be accompanied by visual aids through projectors available in the classrooms. In addition, seminars and various essays will be assigned, to be presented both individually and in groups, as well as self-assessment tests.

Students will also have the opportunity, during their course preparation, to contact the professor and receive guidance in order to achieve quality learning outcomes and academic success.
